

Mesoamerican Mythologies

Symposium presented by the New World Archaeology Council
 Anthropology Department of UC Riverside
 Archaeological Institute of America - Orange County Society
 Beckman Center - Irvine CA
 Saturday, October 18, 2008

The peoples of ancient Mesoamerica, including the Maya, Mixtecs and Aztecs, recorded their mythological beliefs in a wide variety of media, including screenfold books, murals, painted ceramic vessels, and monumental stone carvings. In addition, sixteenth century chroniclers wrote detailed accounts in both Spanish and native languages concerning the doings of gods and cosmogonic acts of creation. From this rich corpus of information, it is readily apparent that many themes are of great geographic range and antiquity, with many beliefs concerning gods of agricultural abundance, the earth, and celestial bodies continuing with contemporary peoples of Mesoamerica.
